

COURT REFUSES TO HALT WORK ON NEW HIGHWAY

Action Must Be Instituted In Dauphin County Court

RULES JUDGE KELLER

This Court Has No Jurisdiction Over the Matter

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 15.—President Judge Hiram H. Keller yesterday handed down an opinion in the Court of Common Pleas in which he ruled that the Court has no jurisdiction in injunction proceedings brought some time ago by two taxpayers of Bensalem township in an effort to have the construction work stopped on the new Lincoln Highway between Philadelphia county line and Janney station.

The Court directed that the bill be dismissed at the costs of the plaintiffs.

The injunction was sought by George T. Downs and William H. Ridge against Secretary of Highways Samuel S. Lewis, of Harrisburg, the Bucks County Commissioners, John S. Roberts, Clarence E. Benner and Norman Reinsider, and the Union Paving Company, of Philadelphia, contractors who are building the new Lincoln Highway link.

The bill in equity was filed some time ago by the plaintiffs. The averments contained in the bill in support of the prayer for an injunction were to the effect that the proposed construction is without authority by law; that it constitutes an abuse of discretion on the part of Secretary of Highways Lewis, and that the carrying out of this alleged illegal contract and work, contemplated thereunder and in connection with the general plan, involves the expenditure of public monies of the Commonwealth in Bucks county which will necessitate the imposing of heavy liabilities on the taxpayers of Bucks county for the paying of an account which is not authorized by law.

The bill asked that a preliminary injunction be granted. On the day fixed for argument, Secretary of Highways Lewis filed a petition raising preliminary objections to the bill of complaint under an Act of March 5, 1925, P. L. 23, in which he questioned the jurisdiction of the Bucks county court. The Court refused the preliminary injunction and reserved the determination of the question of jurisdiction until an answer was filed to the rule granted on the petition. Pending the disposition of the question of jurisdiction, the County Commissioners, party defendants, also filed preliminary objections to the bill in which they assigned the identical reasons as were raised by Secretary of Highways Lewis and asked that the bill be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction and that they be relieved from the necessity of answering.

In their answer to the preliminary objections, the plaintiffs contend that Secretary of Highways Lewis is engaged in doing an illegal act, and hence not an official act, or in line of the execution of his duties; also that by reason of the joinder of two other principal defendants in the bill of complaint, both of whom are within the geographical jurisdiction of Bucks county, and, therefore are subject to the jurisdiction of its Court of Common Pleas, and further that because the purpose of the bill is to restrain the performers of an illegal contract, the Act of 1931, supra, does not apply and that the Common Pleas Court of Bucks county has full jurisdiction. The plaintiffs further contend that the Act of 1931 is unconstitutional in that it violates Article 1, Section 2 and Article 3 Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Judge Keller in his opinion states: "The defendant, Secretary Lewis, is a State officer. He is charged with the construction and maintenance of a State highway system extending throughout the entire state and for the benefit of all its citizens and for the benefit of the public and not merely for any particular community or locality or the citizens thereof. The contracts entered into by him are clearly contracts of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the work thereunder is work done in the State rather than in any particular municipality thereof, notwithstanding that each particular section of work or improvement must, of necessity, have a locus within one of the geographical sub-divisions of the State. Moreover, he is given the right to use discretion in the exercise of his official functions and duties. He has no personal interest in the matter and the injunction asked in the bill, if granted, would not affect him in his personal capacity, but only as an officer of the Commonwealth itself. Accordingly, in my opinion, this constitutes an action against the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

"It has been held that suits to enjoin officers from doing official act which are the acts of, or at least for the direct benefit of, the State, are actions against the State.

"It is urged by the plaintiffs that inasmuch as this suit seeks to restrain the defendants from doing an illegal act it is not an action against the Commonwealth. This is begging the question. The presumption is that a

MAKE DARING RESCUES

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—Daring rescues were effected by firemen as a three alarm blaze swept through the Lou-EI Apartments in West Philadelphia early today routing 300 occupants. The blaze started at 7 a. m. from an overheated oil burner. Joan Dornish, 19, one of the tenants, collapsed from smoke after being rescued. She was given first-aid treatment and revived. Panned by a brisk breeze the blaze raged upward until it appeared the four story structure was doomed. So quickly did the flames spread through the floors, dozens of sleeping men and women were trapped and had to be carried or helped to the street, by firemen and police.

LEARN STORM DETAILS

Tokyo, Nov. 15.—With partial restoration of communication facilities, disrupted by the typhoon which ravaged large areas of Eastern Japan, official reports from outlying sections today indicated the death toll would be far less than had been anticipated. First reports from excited officials of towns and villages laid low by the raging storm, prompted reliable authorities here to estimate the dead in the hundreds but a later check-up showed only 26 known to be dead and 28 missing. Owing to the heavy damage to property with entire towns flooded by swollen rivers and streams and thousands of houses demolished by wind and rain, it was regarded as miraculous the death list was not higher. Tokyo itself suffered heavy damage.

PENITENTIARY INMATES TO MOVE TO NEW BLDG.

Newest and Most Modern of Government Penal Institutions Is at Lewisburg

TO OPEN VERY SOON

LEWISBURG, Nov. 15.—(INS).—Newest and most modern of the Government's penal institutions, the Northeastern Federal Penitentiary is expected to receive its first group of inmates within the next two weeks.

Revolutionary in design from ordinary federal prisons, Northeastern will emphasize correctional work rather than mere service of sentence for commission of crime. Its design incorporates ideas derived from a European tour of penal institutions by Sanford Bates, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Positive relief from overcrowded conditions now existing at other federal prisons, notably Atlanta, will follow the opening of the new penitentiary. Three hundred Atlanta convicts will be transferred here and probably will make up the first contingent of Northeastern's inmates.

The principles to be followed in administration at Northeastern are aptly epitomized by an ancient inscription carved over the arch of the station in the auditorium, which is large enough to seat all the prisoners at one time. It reads:

"That which is past and gone is irrevocable and wise men have enough to do with things present and to come."

There will be no "big house" at Northeastern, in keeping with this aim. There will be cell blocks, but only for what are to be known as disciplinary cases.

For other prisoners there will be ten higher types of confinement rooms.

PLAN CONSOLIDATION OF SMALL SCHOOL UNITS

One of the Topics to Be Considered for School
Legislation

PROVEN A SUCCESS

(Thorough revision of Pennsylvania's school code at the next session of the General Assembly, starting less than two months hence, appears likely. Recommendations for incorporation in the new code already have been made. Following is the first of a series of three articles dealing with proposed changes.—I. N. S.)

By Joseph A. Loftus

HARRISBURG, Nov. 15.—(INS).—The education congress recently ended saw the demands to overhaul and revamp Pennsylvania's school code shaped concretely for submission to the General Assembly.

One of the immediate objectives is legislative action to provide for the consolidation of the smaller school districts in the interest of efficiency and economy.

This decision of the commission for the study of educational problems, the first step toward the community unit of school administration, climaxes more than 30 years of discussion brought to a head through efforts of State Superintendent James N. Rule in setting up the commission more than a year ago.

To demonstrate advantages of the annexation or merger plan for districts of less than one thousand population, J. Andrew Morrow, Bradford county superintendent, showed what it would do for a certain Pennsylvania county with 49,000 population and 40,868 school children.

It has one third class and 54 fourth class districts, 42 of the latter with less than 1,000 population. Following the recommended plan, the fourth class districts could be reduced to 25 and eventually to fifteen. Teachers could be reduced by 37 without a building program. For all items of expense there would be a net saving to the State and district of $59,000, and (Continued on Page 2)

REFUSES PAROLE TO DEATH CAR DRIVER

Judges Decline Appeal of Alvin McEntee For Freedom

JOHN LEARY RELEASED

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 15.—President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer, of the Bucks county courts, yesterday refused to grant a parole to Alvin McEntee, 29, who was responsible for the deaths of two people within three months because of his drinking.

McEntee, a lumber-jack from the Erwinna section, was sentenced on November 10, 1931, to serve two sentences, one of six months and the other of not less than eighteen months or more than three years in the Bucks County Prison, or a total sentence of two to three years. He was convicted of driving an automobile while drunk and in another case, he was convicted of involuntary manslaughter with a recommendation of mercy from the court.

McEntee has served one year and four days. His petition for parole was presented in court yesterday. McEntee told the Court that if he were granted a parole he could "lay off liquor for good" and that he had a job waiting for him, operating his two saw mills. The costs in the case amount to $311.50.

Judge Keller informed McEntee that he had been given a very lenient sentence and that the Court would not look favorably upon the application for parole for criminals who have served but a small part of their sentence.

"In this case, the lives of two persons were snuffed out as a result of McEntee's drinking," Judge Keller remarked. "The application is denied at this time."

A parole was granted yesterday to John Leary, of Buckingham, charged with burglary. Leary was warned to keep away from Buckingham Township because his neighbors did not want him back there again. He was sentenced on March 21, to serve not less than six months or more than two years in the county prison.

HOOVER TO SHOW THAT UNITED FRONT MUST BE TAKEN IN DEALING WITH WAR PAYMENT DEMANDS

Will Point Out to Governor Roosevelt That Congress is Already On Record As Opposed To Cancellation or Reduction of Debts

By George E. Burno
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

A BOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—(INS).—Any effort on the part of the Hoover administration to secure a further extension of the European debt moratorium from Congress will be contingent on a public pledge of support by President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt.

President Hoover will take the position, when he engages his successor in next week's history-making conference, that a united front must be taken in dealing with the Allied demands for extension and revision of war payments. The Governor's wire accepting the White House invitation was received last night at Hutchinson, Kan.

He will point out to Governor Roosevelt that Congress is already on record as expressly opposing cancellation or reduction, and advise him—to quote the invitation to the White House conference—that "if there is to be any change in the attitude of Congress it will be greatly affected by the views of those members who recognize you as their leader and who will properly desire your counsel and advice."

This outline of the President's position was given International News Service as his special train rushed through Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

When the question first came up, a year and a half ago, of giving Europe relief from its war debt obligations, Mr. Hoover called in a sufficient number of members of both Houses to assure ratification of a moratorium when Congress assembled the first week in December. Again this year, foreign payments are due December 15 with Congress convening just ten days before. No deferment is possible without congressional sanction.

"I am prepared to deal with the sub-

Cane Rush, Tug-of-War
Feature "Sophs" Initiation

By Oscar Corn

Yesterday at Bristol high school, one of the most important events of the year was held. The Sophomores were given a chance, by the upper classmen, to limit their initiation to a period of one week.

For the past week the "Sophs" had certain special rules to obey. All the boys had to wear orange crepe paper bow ties, while the girls wore hair ribbons of the same material. Last Thursday in chapel they entertained with cheers and songs.

Yesterday the girls had to win a tug-of-war from the Juniors and Seniors, or else wear their "beautiful" hair ribbons for another week. As they easily did this, they are immune from orange crepe paper.

With the Sophomore boys it was a different story. The upperclassmen, in a short time, managed to run the cane over their goal for an easy victory. Orange crepe paper bow-ties will, therefore, still be flourished by the male sex of the "Sophs."

Langhorne Legion and Auxiliary

S. LANGHORNE CASINO

LANGHORNE, Nov. 15.—Nine players, taking part in "Adam's Apple," at the South Langhorne Casino next Friday evening, will keep a crowded house amused for two hours. The farce-comedy is good cause for mirth, and the nine actresses and actors, as shown in the intensive rehearsals, will carry off their respective parts well.

The three-act play is being staged by members of the Jesse W. Soby Post, 148, American Legion, and the American Legion Auxiliary. It is produced through special arrangement with Samuel French of New York.

The parts portrayed and impersonators are: Adam VanAlstyne, Horace C. Prevost; Eve VanAlstyne, his wife, Mrs. Harry Friedrich; Cecily Tennant, Miss Mary Keating; "Billy" Aldrich, Joseph Zalat; Maggie, the cook, Mrs. Joseph Downing; Caspar, a detective, Harry Friedrich; Riggs, a lunatic, Samuel Russell; Uncle John, Joseph Downing; assistant to Caspar and the footman, parts taken by Ralph Christie.

The previous plays staged by the Legion and auxiliary have drawn large crowds, who left the performance well pleased; and this production is of the same high calibre as all plays given by these organizations. Miss Rita Keating has been directing the production.

Curtain will rise at 8.15.

EXCHANGE CLUB ASKS COUNCIL TO REGULATE TRAFFIC

Suggests One-Way Routes On
Pond and Wood
Streets

OTHER COUNCIL AFFAIRS

Permission asked to Hang
Signs On Mill
Street

Traffic conditions on Pond and on Wood streets were called to the attention of Borough Council last night in a communication from the Bristol Exchange Club.

It was suggested that Pond street and also Wood street from Market to Mill street, be made one-way streets so as to avoid cars being "trapped" which often occurs now. Cars parking on both sides of these two thoroughfares do not leave sufficient space for other cars to pass going in opposite directions.

The matter was left in the hands of the police committee with power to act.

Requests for permission to hang signs in front of 245 Mill street, 413 Mill street and 237 Mill street, were referred to street and highway committee with power to act.

Police committee reported making 17 arrests with the following disposition of the cases: Fined, two; held for court, three; discharged, eight; turned over to other police, one; turned over to county jail, three.

Ninety-four lodgers were given shelter; six small lights were reported out and five doors found open.

Permission was found to place a channel light at Mulberry street to guide river traffic.

Requests for light on Wood street above Adams Hollow Creek was referred to street and highway committee with instructions to place the light.

Request for permission to drill artesian well beneath sidewalk in front of Keystone Dairy Company's plant was referred to street and highway committee with power to act.

Councilmen present were Wagner, Winters, Williams, Warner, Wiesner, Schmidt, Myers, Vandegrift, Duffy, Winslow, Spezzano, Fry, Spencer, Littleton and Pfeiffer.

In the contest which closed October 15th, individuals were asked to build sentences from the words "Greater Good Space," each sentence containing 16 words with the initial letters of each corresponding with the letters in the three above-mentioned words.

Dr. Robert B. H. Bell To Be at Beverly, N. J. for Week

BEVERLY, N. J., Nov. 15.—Dr. Robert B. H. Bell, who last fall gave a series of lectures at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, is again booked for Beverly, N. J. Many will recall with pleasure Dr. Bell's visit last year. Due to the success of last year's mission, Dr. Bell has been prevailed upon to return to Beverly by Rev. Hollis W. Colwell, rector of St. Stephen's Church.

Dr. Bell's lectures are, as those know from hearing him last year, based on the ever-popular subject, health. Being a student of psychology for 29 years and a student of dietetics for many years, Dr. Bell is eminently qualified to lecture on the subject of health and its many phases.

Everyone in the community is cordially invited to attend the mission and hear these remarkable talks.

TAX RECEIPTS GROW

New hope has been taken at the Federal Treasury where the first improvements in many months have been noted in recent weeks. There is not even a forlorn hope of balancing the budget before the next Congress, but the least increase in revenue and decrease in expenditures is a hopeful sign.

Departmental and bureau costs fell off $176,000,000 during the first four months of the current fiscal year, assuring a saving of better than half a billion dollars for the entire year. This is not a great saving for the taxpayers with a Federal budget of more than four billions, but it helps.

Relief also comes from the opposite direction. The yield of the new miscellaneous taxes, which amounted to only $42,400,000 in July, reached $78,000,000 in October. This monthly yield is still $22,000,000 short of the estimate of the authors of the tax.

The post office department has not yet balanced its budget through the higher postal rates, although it also is in an improved position. Its October deficit of $10,000,000 was only half of that of the preceding October.

Largely responsible for the four months' deficit of $629,800,000 was a drop in excess of $200,000,000 in customs and income tax receipts during the first third of the fiscal year. This condition will be corrected partly during the last half of the fiscal year when the new income levies are expected to bring in millions of new revenue.

Although the picture is brighter in a number of spots it still leaves the shadow of further tax increases unless Washington makes drastic cuts in government costs.

MORTGAGE MORATORIUM

Ohio contributes a depression-relief device which has outstanding merits and which should have been invented and introduced in all 48 states four years ago. In the next depression it will be a forethought instead of an afterthought.

This instrument for real relief where it is most needed is a farm and home protective committee, which Governor White has appointed to act as a go-between between mortgagors and mortgagees to avert foreclosures. It proposes to accomplish by moral suasion what the state cannot do by law.

Behind this movement is the knowledge that borrower and lender have mutuality of interest in working out the salvation of mortgaged property. The borrower stands to lose his equity and lender the difference between the present depreciated value and the original sale price. In most instances both benefit when foreclosure is avoided.

Depression-hit corporations have averted receivership by asking their bondholders not to deposit interest coupons during the business shut-down, which is the very thing Ohio is striving to do for mortgaged homes and farms. It is sound, logical and beneficial.

There is no duplication of effort here between the committee and the home loan bank system set up by the Federal Government, the latter stepping in to make it possible for mortgagors to grant what concessions the committee may ask of them.

Plan Consolidation Of Small School Units

 better school advantages would be given to 644 pupils of closed schools, Morrow explained.

For this county the merging plan would change the lowest true assessed valuation per pupil from $2000 to $1,600 and the highest from $2800 to $2,400, Morrow said. Testing the mergers against the teacher-pupil ratio plan of State subsidy proposed to the Congress, he found the ability to pay by the new set-up of districts would get less State aid than at present; that the county now appears to be over-supplied with teachers on an efficiency basis; and total increase of State subsidy for teacher salaries for the year would be $41,361.

Applying the newly proposed principle of increased State aid to rural districts, fewer teachers and the suggested scale of ten per cent decrease in teachers' salaries. Superintendent Morrow found there would be reduction in mill levy in some community school districts by four mills, in others, six, eight and nine mills, and 14 and one-half mills in one district.

Congress speakers declared most other leading States have adopted some form of the larger unit plan while Pennsylvania has lagged behind with the township unit "belonging to the ox-cart, the horse and buggy and mud puddle days" and which can make only "rocking horse progress" in present days of good roads, rapid and easy transportation.

Quality is an Asset

Cheapness a Liability

Never was there a time when merchants and customers had greater need for mutual trust and loyalty.

The merchant needs trade-building business to survive these critical times. Likewise the customer confused by current price clamor and bargain boasting is entirely dependent upon his dealer for truth and quality.

The merchant who gives extra value today, based upon genuine quality, is rendering a service that will net him customer confidence for all time to come. And the customer in no position today to discriminate in the confusion of cheap prices, extravagant advertising claims and camouflaged quality is only safe in placing his reliance on stores that have always fostered quality, integrity and patron good-will.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LXI.

SMALL beads of sweat dampened his forehead . . . he might at least have looked into it before he turned everything over to the girl . . . He reached for the telephone at his bedside . . .

"Number, please?" the operator asked.
 For an instant he hesitated. Then he slammed up the receiver. "Hell's bells! I'll not back down now. I'll let 'er ride!"

And in the office, all unconscious of the struggle that was going on in Greely's mind, Daphne Haines made neat piles of Allan's most personal belongings, the contents of the little black tin box.

There were newspaper clippings in one pile. The things we keep are such a giveaway . . . but Allan's all pertained to another man. "Card Halfback on His Way to Recovery." "Cardinal Captain Demon on Offense." "McKevitt for All American." Daphne laid them aside swiftly. She knew some of the most florid almost by heart. They were the same clippings she had once collected . . . stories of Ralph McKevitt, one-time Cardinal captain, the greatest halfback Stanford ever knew.

There were pictures too . . . Ralph with a football under his arm. Ralph shaking hands with the Coach, Ralph with the team, Ralph in action, tearing down the turf.

Daphne laid them face downward on the desk. They no longer thrilled her. She thought dispassionately, "I wasn't the only one who worshipped him. It's plain poor Allan did. He wasn't worth it . . . nobody is . . ."

Her young mouth was set in a hard, straight line. She took the small handful of papers and pictures that remained, and spread them before her on the desk.

Old Mr. Greely was restless. Up and down, up and down, he paced, lighting cigars, and letting them go out. Tock, tock, tock, tock the big bronze clock in the library recorded the passing minutes. One o'clock, two o'clock, three o'clock. Was there ever such a long day? Sunday papers littered the floor, cigar ashes everywhere. He couldn't read, and he couldn't smoke. He had another glass of port from the decanter on the table.

Tap, tap, tap . . . Sister Anne's high heels on the hardwood floor of the hall . . . With surprising dexterity he made a leap for the first side chair, and dropped into it, pulling a sheet of paper over his face. Just in time.

Sister Anne paused in the doorway. "John, are you asleep?" A faint snore?

"John?"
 Another snore. So she must be away, disappointment written large on her round, stupid face, and when she had gone he lowered the paper and sat there staring into the fire.

Over and over again Daphne read the letter, the letter that Allan Winters wrote one mad September night, and never meant her to have.

"He should have told me!" she whispered over and over again. "It wasn't fair not to tell me!"

She got up and moved around the stark, empty office, wringing her hands, mourning, as if for someone who was dead. The stiff, finely written sheets writhed on the desk where she had dropped them, with a curious, whispering sound, as if they had come to life and were talking to her. . . . She came quickly and flattened them out so that they ceased crackling.

And there they lay, looking up at her mutely . . . those crumpled pages . . . the story of Allan's love. Little detached sentences jumped up at her . . . "I always loved you, ever since that first day at Bolinas . . . I made up my mind I would never see you again when I realized you belonged to Ralph . . . want you to have the best . . . owe so much to Ralph . . ."

It was as if he were there, talking . . . why had she never seen him so clearly before? His tall, rangy figure, his clear, bright blue him, where an hour ago there had been just a faded snapshot of a dog barking at something invisible in a tree, and on the back, in unformed childish writing, "My dere Peter, Died Sept. 3, 1910."

Even the blue and red ribbons with their blackened gilt inscriptions, relics of old Jim Winters' stables, were part of Allan . . . a young Allan who hung around his father's horses, rejoicing in their triumphs . . . Rejoicing in the honors the eyes, the thin, freckled face, the rough light brown hair. . . . She could feel the warm salt air, hear the sea breaking on Bolinas Beach . . . they were running along the hard sand together, he was laughing, looking up into her eyes.

And now they were dancing on a crowded floor, swimming through a maze of dancers, clinging to each other, lost in the music, forgetful of everything . . . of yesterday, and tomorrow. . . . "Kiss me—just once!" She heard him saying that again . . . They were on Mrs. Hinckle's stairs . . .

She put her hands over her eyes. . . . "No, no . . . it isn't fair! . . . it isn't right to let things happen like that . . ."

The crumpled pages began to rustle again . . . "Don't!" she whispered, pushing them away, as if they were alive. She could push them away, but she couldn't push Allan Winters away. He had never seemed so close. The room was full of him . . . every scrap of paper, every yellowed photograph pulsed with him . . . Where once she had seen a sad-eyed woman in a drooping picture hat, and a dapper horseman in gaudy dress—just pictures of Allan's parents—she saw Allan now, a lanky, wistful child . . . Allan romping with his horses won, rejoicing in Ralph McKevitt's football honors . . . oh Allan, Allan wasn't there anything of your own to cherish? Weren't you ever proud of yourself at all? She reached out her hands, as if to comfort him, and quite suddenly he was gone. She was alone in an empty office with a pile of old papers. A sense of utter desolation came over her. The letter cracked in her hands. A loud sound in the deserted, silent place. She put her hand on the littered desk and wept.

She heard the telephone ringing. It must have been ringing a long time. "Hello," she said when she got there, but there was no one on the wire. "Will you excuse it?" Central said.

So Mr. Greely decided that his hunch was wrong, his secretary wasn't working after all. He got his hat and his stick and went for a walk.

But his call aroused Daphne. She washed her face and hands in cold water, struggled back to something like composure. No use crying. No use dreaming of what might have been. "I've got a job anyway," she thought. "That's more than I'd have if I'd listened to Ralph. After all, Allan took care of himself—he skipped . . . oh, well!"

TRIANGLES INVADE BUCKS
AND WIN CROYDON FRAY

CROYDON, Nov. 15.—Invading Bucks County, via Croydon, the Philadelphia Triangles opened up with a barrage of forward passes that netted them two touchdowns and a 13 to 0 victory at Eddington Field Sunday. The fray took place before 4,000 excited spectators.

A score for the home team seemed imminent late in the second quarter when Dean broke away for a 40 yard run to be followed immediately by a 15 yard gain through the line by Schwarz. But the time keeper's whistle intervened for the half period as the ball rested on the five yard stripe.

Stet Crossley and Schwarz made consistent gains through the entire game with Fields starting time after time by snatching forward passes, but Croydon was unable to score. Once, in the third quarter Lake snatched a pass from Dean for a thirty yard gain and was downed on the Triangles fifteen yard line, but on the next play a fumble was recovered by the defenders of the goal and kicked out of danger.

The game was lost to Triangles through aerial work. Connors completed a pass to Pecunia who ran fifteen yards for a marker. Later in the quarter a pass by the same men and the receiver ran fifty yards for a goal. Croydon stood up well on line defense with Conn and Rogers, Collins and Kutzer starting.

Line-up:	Phila. Triangles
Conn	left guard
Lewis	center
Ludwig	right guard
Earl	right tackle
Collins	right end
Baines	quarter back
S. Crossley	half back

Down the Bowling Alleys

Gus Bauer's All-Stars came to Bristol last night and gave the home boys a neat shelling in a big pin match, beating them almost 300 pins, but in a special two-man duck pin match the Bristol team came off with high honors by the close margin of 3 pins.

"Old Man" Amisson was high with a single of 258 and a total of 665.

Move To New Building

the most elaborate being equipped with shower baths. The rooms are to be well-lighted, even the cell rooms.

The entire prison, with the exception of the factory, is one huge structure connected with a labyrinth of corridors. Customary prison walls enclose 26 of the 1,050 acres of land nestled in Union County's hills which comprise the prison tract. Modern principles in the social reclamation of convicted men will be put into practice by Warden Henry C. Hill, formerly of Joliet, Ill.

Every facility is to be provided for prisoners who desire to study. Vocational training in classrooms will be offered and there will be a large and up-to-date library. Trades of all kinds will be offered and will be taught in the factory, located just behind the main building.

Careful diagnosis of all new prisoners for physical or mental ailments will be made before they are committed to the prison. Upon their arrival they will be housed in a receiving ward. A period of quarantine will follow, after which they will be assigned to one of the stronger types of housing until they have proved they can be trusted.

When they so prove, they will be assigned to a better room and will work with the convicts engaged in gardening outside the prison. Plans are to have all the 1,022 acres outside the walls devoted to farming.

Although the prison still is in charge of the construction company, guards are being assigned to the various gates and the administrative staff is being assembled.

Inside the walls, walks and roads are being laid as the final touches are added to the building proper. A siding has been extended from the Reading Railroad into the prison. Work is nearing completion in building roads from the institution to main arteries of the State.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 12.—(INS)—The table grape industry which brings this delicious fruit by the basketful to thousands of Pennsylvania homes throughout the fall is of comparatively recent origin, according to officials of the State Bureau of Markets. Not until the discovery and introduction of the concord grape in 1854, was a compact bunch grape developed, thus making possible the present table grape trade.

Pennsylvania today is one of the leading grape growing States and produces annually more than 20,000 tons. The output here is exceeded only by the production of California, New York, Michigan, and Ohio. Because of the favorable climatic and soil conditions, grapes in the Northeastern United States grow best near large bodies of fresh water and for that reason the industry in Pennsylvania has centered in Erie county. Larger grapes with a higher sugar content can be grown in that section than in any other part of the State.

The "Rajah" Returns

By HARDIN BURNLEY

The RAJAH.

HORNSBY—AS HE LOOKED WHEN AT HIS PEAK—THE GREATEST OF MODERN HITSMITHS!

THE HORNSBY OF TODAY—OLDER AND MUCH SLOWER, WITH HIS BATTING EYE UNDIMMED—HE WILL TRY A COMEBACK AS A PLAYER WITH ST. LOUIS NEXT YEAR!

NEXT spring the attention of thousands of the nation's baseball fans will be centered on the attempted comeback of Rogers Hornsby, one of the greatest hitters in National League history and the stormy petrel of the Beyer circuit.

Everyone knows about the spectacular ups and downs of Hornsby's career as a manager and player, and the Rajah's engagement as a player by Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals is no surprise to those who have become accustomed to astonishing events where Hornsby is concerned. Six years ago this same Mr. Breadon created a furore by firing Hornsby immediately after the "Rajah" had piloted his team to a world's championship; and now Sam "stuns" the baseball world again by rehiring Hornsby just when Rogers appeared due to be left out in the cold by major league teams.

The statement which was given out by Breadon recently said that Hornsby was to be used as a player, and of course that means that Rogers will try to out Frisch from the second base position. If Hornsby can make good at the Keystone sack, Frisch will probably be shifted to third base.

The general opinion regarding Hornsby's comeback as an active player is that, if he can get himself into good physical condition next spring, he may make a very surprising showing, considering the fact that his legs are supposed to be "gone" and he hasn't played as a regular for several seasons.

The "Rajah's" batting eye is as keen as ever, and the whole question seems to revolve around his ability to stand the grueling pace of a whole season's infield play. If his legs hold out, Hornsby might even lead the league again next season.

A lot of whispering is going on to the effect that Hornsby will replace "Gabby" Street as manager of the St. Louis team before the 1933 season is very far gone. The fact remains that Breadon was dissatisfied with Street's handling of the Cardinals last season, but every chance to prove his managerial ability before Breadon decides to ease him out as St. Louis pilot.
